

Universe Uniting

By K. Brendi Poppel

In this world of worry and woe
In this land of stress and strife,
A love-starved people need to know
Why we exist, the meaning of life.
Is it over in a flash? Are we just dust, born to die?
Or is there something more ... a soul and Spirit inside?
You know I believe eternity is real
Tell me, how could it not be?
Must there not be an intelligent Source?
And much more than the eye can see...
How could we be an orphan of the universe?
Is there not a Great Creator behind the starry skies?
Who beholds us with mercy, our sorrows and our doubts,
Envelopes us in love and opens up our eyes.
To see beyond our little world
Beyond the petty feuds and fighting,
And expands our horizons into infinite wonder
At the spectacular unfolding of a universe uniting.
